SAVANNAH: THE SOCIETY, 1976

INTRODUCTION.

B. Sherman
The Georgia Historical Society is publishing this checklist of its 18th century manuscript collections as a contribution to the Bicentennial of the United States.

The smaller collections are described in more detail than are the larger ones, though in the latter an attempt was made to cite the important correspondents and subject matter. For collections where a calendar is available it is noted at the end of the descriptive paragraphs; for example, the Joseph Vallence Bevan Papers and the Telfair Family Papers. Where there are papers of more than one family member, they have been grouped together. These are the Habershams, the Joneses and the Telfairs.

In instances where there are copies rather than original papers, it is noted, naming the holders of the originals when known. Papers that have been published are also noted, with citations to the publications.

The collections have been numbered from 1 through 176 to facilitate indexing. The numbers at the end of each description are the library file numbers which should be noted when asking for any of the papers.

The only 18th century manuscripts omitted are legal documents, inasmuch as these are of record in either the Georgia Surveyor-General Department or various courthouses.

The preparation of this checklist was made possible by an intern grant from Governor Busbee's office to Miss Karen E. Osvald who spent the summer of 1975 working with us on the papers. It is being published under a grant from the Georgia Commission for the National Bicentennial Celebration.

- 6 BEVAN (JOSEPH VALLENCE) PAPERS, 1733-1812.

Bevan (1798-1830); a Savannah lawyer, was appointed official historian of Georgia in 1824. He was to arrange the state's official papers and publish the more important ones. He also undertook to write a history of Georgia. In this capacity he copied many of the state's papers and collected others from private sources. He died before he could finish his work. His papers were scattered, some lost. Those in the Georgia Historical Society's collection are largely copies; some are original manuscripts. Some were separated from the body of the papers and are listed separately. There are official colony and state papers and letters and other papers of individuals. They cover various phases of colony and state government, Indian affairs, including originals of lists of presents to the Indians, 1749-1751, Revolutionary War military affairs, the Yazoo speculation. Not included in this checklist are those after 1798 with the exception of a few which relate to the Revolution. Official papers are Lists of Acts disallowed under the Royal Government, 1755-1775; Proceedings of Governor and Council, 1774-1780 (copy); Proceedings of Executive Council, 1778-1779, 1782; extracts from the journals of the Georgia House and Senate and resolutions; letters to and from the Governors; proclamations; Indian talks.

The writers of letters, depositions, etc., are, in alphabetical order: Timothy Barnard, Richard Call, Patrick Carr, Elijah Clark, Zachariah Cox, Count d'Estaing, Nathanael Greene, James Gunn, Abner Hammond, James Jackson, John Loverel, James Madison, M. A. B. Mangourit, Governor Mathews, Old Tossell (Cherokee Chief), John Nepommene de Quesada, Archer Norris, Andrew Pickens, Daniel Stewart, Anthony Wayne, Charles Weatherford, Solomon Wood. Two letters written to Bevan in 1812 relating to the writers' Revolutionary War experiences are from Samuel Beckcom and Richard Winn. There are also parts of two other such letters from sources not yet identified. It is not possible to describe this collection in detail in this space. There is a complete checklist, partially annotated, in the Society's library.
